

What Justice Means To Me

I believe justice is important because everyone deserves a chance in equality. Justice is important to me because inequality of health insurance, social justice, equality and equal opportunity is relevant to our everyday lives. I believe this will help us succeed as individuals and as human beings in the society that we live in today.

In my opinion, inequality of health insurance means that you shouldn't have to fight with the insurance company to get things you need to improve your health. The proper health insurance will help you focus in school to get a better education. I feel that way about it because I am hearing impaired in my left ear. My parents and I have been put into situations where we had to fight with the insurance company for what's right and just. I need specific tools to help better my education or make me feel somewhat normal and couldn't afford them. The insurance company would tell us "we don't cover this type of expense". They said, "Why would I need insurance for tools to help me get a good education". This is very aggravating for my family and I.

I do not think you should have to fight for that long I don't think it is necessary. I honestly think it is a childish game the government likes to play on citizens because all they see are dollar signs. If you really think about it, our society has changed a lot. I honestly believe equality means not getting criticized about something you want to do just because you're a certain gender, race, or heritage.

One of my biggest questions is why do most people think a lady can't do a job that a man normally does? To me equality means that someone should not be chosen just because they are older than another person, people should be treated equal. I believe younger people are just as capable as older people and may or may not be able to achieve more than grown-ups.

If you ask me, equality means getting equal rights and consequences for different situations such as fights, no matter what gender, age, race or heritage you are. I believe you should get equal rights whether you are lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender or questioning. You should not be judged for embracing who you are.

All of these different types of justices have meanings for me that are most likely based off of situations that have happened in my life, that is why they are so personal to me. I believe that everyone has their own beliefs and they should not get criticized for them because people are entitled to their own opinion, for example, being sexist is a choice, I don't like it but that is somebody else's choice and opinion so I can't really say anything. I think about like there is only so much you can do to make someone see the bigger picture, meaning you can't judge the person for having that belief, you have to make them understand why that is wrong or why they shouldn't do that.
